2.1. Empathy Map

2.2. Brainstorm and idea prioritization

Brainstorm & idea prioritization

Use this template in your own brainstorming sessions so your team can unleash their imagination and start shaping concepts even if you're not sitting in the same room.

Before you collaborate

A brainstorming session goes a long way with the number of ideas you need to get going.

Define your problem statement

What problem are you trying to solve? Frame your problem as a clear, specific question. The quality of your ideas depends on the focus of your problem.

Brainstorm

What ideas are you coming up with? Write down as many ideas as you can. Don't worry about whether an idea is good or bad. The goal is to generate as many ideas as possible.

Group ideas

Now sort through your ideas with clustering similar or related ideas as you go. Once all ideas have been grouped, you can start evaluating the ideas. It's okay to reject ideas that are not relevant to your problem or that are not feasible.

Priorities

Put your ideas on the same page about which are most important. Use the matrix to determine which ideas are most important and feasible.

After you collaborate

You can export the results as an image or PDF to share with others. You can also use the results to inform your next steps.

Brainstorming rules
